 - The Megaphone/Share Sistrunk. August 29, 2015. This effort focused on highlighting and celebrating an historic African-American community in Fort Lauderdale. This effort transformed a shipping container into an open-access community “stage” intended to “amplify” the voice of community residents, culminating in the “Share Sistrunk” event, where residents came together to share stories of the neighborhood’s history and celebrate the accomplishments of its residents (<https://youtu.be/7H1ZSi0ztVc>). At the completion of the event, the “megaphone” container was deeded to the community, and continues to host events planned and programmed by the local residents (<https://northwestgardens.net/megaphone>)
 - C’est La Via: Rethinking the Alleyways. April 12, 2014. This event engaged the residents of West Palm Beach to transform the city’s alleys into pedestrian “vias.” Following the event, the City of West Palm Beach created a new “Office of Public Life,” focused on the use of similar installations to explore the transformation of city’s public spaces. (<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=nvtw3H1iB0c>)

- Park(ing) Day 2013. September 20, 2013. This effort transformed 5 on-street parking spaces in downtown West Palm Beach into parklets. The positive response to the event by both local businesses and local officials has led to the adoption of a formal parklet program in downtown West Palm Beach.
- Purple Line Miami. March 8-9, 2013. This event transformed a highway underpass into a “pop-up” transit station. In advance of the opening of the Brightline commuter rail station, the event was designed to highlight the role of transit plays in connecting diverse segments of Miami-Dade County’s population, to create a forum for advocating for future transit investments in South Florida, and to identify barriers, such as bicycle and pedestrian access, that hinder the effective use of transit. The event was attended by more than 3,000 people and was heavily featured in both local and national press (<http://purplelinemiami.blogspot.com/>)
- Park(ing) Day 2012. September 21, 2012. This event transformed 3 parking spaces in downtown Fort Lauderdale into urban parklets. Installations included a street café, a pop-up transit station and information kiosk, and an urban garden. Following the demonstration, the City of Fort Lauderdale adopted a policy allowing local businesses to transforming parking spaces to parklets.
- Better Block Fort Lauderdale. June 16, 2012. Transformed the 600 block of NW 1st avenue into a livable street, demonstrating the applicability of “shared space” traffic calming devices in South Florida. The project resulted in the establishment of an ongoing community advocacy group focused on the development and promotion of the FAT Village Arts district (<https://www.facebook.com/BetterBlockFtL/>)
